- Provided specialist advice to the scientists in various disciplines on data collection, data analysis, interpretation of results, designing of field experiments & surveys and statistical computing;
- Developed strategies for ongoing management using statistical information;
- Developed a statistical model to forecast the annual and bi-monthly national coconut production nine months in advance. This method is still being used by the CRI and outcome is used for various policies planning in the coconut sector by Ministry of Plantation Industries, Central Bank and other agencies.
- Developed two survey methodologies: (i) to acquire yield data regularly from different coconut growers in collaboration of regional offices of the Coconut Cultivation Board and (ii) to acquire consumption of coconut nuts and coconut oil by householders in Sri Lanka in collaboration with Department of Census and Statistics and Divisional Secretaries. The outcome of this is being used by stake holders to generate various policy decisions including Central Bank of Sri Lanka.
- Carried out research in Applied Statistics and Climate Change relevant to coconut industry
- Carried out collaborative projects with other research institutes and government department
- Carried out socio-economic surveys with other scientists and published associated reports ;
- Responsible for administration and management of the Division
